

4 STANDARDS ARE ADDED TO "WHITE WAY"

Borough Council Adopts "Stagger" System Of Installation Here.

LOCKUP PLANS ARE APPROVED

After adding four standards to round out Gettysburg's projected "white way," council voted to adopt the "stagger" system of installation at the December meeting, Monday evening.

Under the "stagger" system, the standards are placed cater-cornered from each other, thereby placing one light at the end of each of the four streets, radiating from center square.

Councilman said that in order to round out the work properly it would be better to add another standard at the end of each street inasmuch as there will be two lights at the center square entrances to the four streets.

L. O. Buckner, of the Metropolitan Edison light company, presented the "stagger" system and the "opposite" system for lighting the first blocks of the four streets radiating from the square. Under the "opposite" system, the light standards are placed opposite each other.

The same number of lights would be used under each system, with eight each on York and Chambersburg streets and six each on Baltimore and Carlisle streets.

The cost of the additional standards will be $174 a year, Mr. Buckner informed council, and the entire cost of the system will be $1,891 a year, for 32 standards.

Work on the installation of the "white way" is expected to begin immediately, and is to be completed by May 1, 1934.

President A. R. LeVan voted against the "stagger" system just as he voted against the original motion for the installation of a "white way" at the November meeting.

He said he voted against the "white way" because he feared it would increase taxes. All other councilmen voted for the "white way."

William Johns, Steinwehr avenue, appeared before council with an offer for a site for a permanent building to be erected by the borough under civil works supervision for use as a factory. The building would be owned by the borough and leased as a factory.

After thanking Mr. Johns for his "generous offer," President LeVan appointed Councilmen C. Ray Rupp, D. C. Stallsmith and E. C. Williams to work with the industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the proposition.

Health Complaint
Members of the board of health appeared before council to hear complaints of councilmen that outside toilets are not being kept clean.

G. Harry Roth, president of the board of health, who acted as spokesman for that board, asked council to give the board's secretary and health officer a list of places where dirty outside toilets are being maintained, stating that the health officer "would look them over."

"Yes, that's all he ever does—look them over," Councilman C. W. Epley replied.

Earle Deardorff, secretary of the board of health and borough health officer, then informed council that he ordinance governing outside toilets carries with it no penalty for failing to comply with his demands.

J. Donald Swope, Esq., the borough solicitor, then looked up the board of health ordinance and found that penalties are provided for failing to comply with board of health regulations.

Prosecute Violators

The board of health was informed that Mr. Swope would prosecute all cases of violations of borough ordinances covering outside toilets and hogpens.

The board also was asked by council to pass a resolution asking council to pass an ordinance for the elimination of all outside toilets and hogpens in the borough before April 1, 1935. Mr. Roth said the board would meet shortly to act upon council's recommendation.

To Survey Town

The most comprehensive survey ever made of Gettysburg will be offered as one of the borough's projects under the CWA as the result of action taken at the meeting. The survey, which will give employment for many men and some women, will give the location of every property in Gettysburg, its size, the number of bathrooms and toilets, whether it is connected with the sewerage system or not.

Reconstruction Of Local Sewage Plant Is Sought As Huge CWA Work Project

Re-construction of Gettysburg's sewage treatment plant today was submitted to Eric H. Biddle, state administrator for the civil works administration, as a local CWA project, by James R. McConaghie, Adams county administrator.

Mr. McConaghie agreed to submit the re-construction project after a conference this morning with W. D. Vosbury, of the borough's engineering firm of Remington, Vosbury and Goff, of Camden, New Jersey, and Councilman Emory C. Williams.

The local administrator said he could not promise that the state administrator would approve the project insofar as materials are concerned, but he expressed the belief that the labor costs of the job would be approved.

The total cost of rebuilding the sewage treatment plant will be approximately $70,000, of which Mr. Vosbury estimated fifty per cent will represent the cost of materials and necessary machinery.

Mr. McConaghie informed Mr. Vosbury and Mr. Williams that he has applied for $15,000 from the federal government under the public works' administration for materials for the re-construction of the sewage treatment plant, but as yet has not received approval of the application.

Under the civil works administration, no money is available for materials, so that that cost may have to be borne jointly by the borough and the federal government. If the federal government approves the $15,000 grant for materials, asked for by Mr. McConaghie, Gettysburg will have to raise approximately $20,000 for materials.

May Start Soon

If the CWA administrator agrees to allot funds to pay for the labor and the federal government approves the $15,000 grant for materials, work on the reconstruction of the sewage treatment plant will start immediately.

Mr. McConaghie is anxious to have the work begin as soon as possible in view of the unprecedented rush of unemployed to the local reemployment office within the past few days.

Other projects submitted to Mr. Biddle today from Gettysburg and Adams county follow:

Construction of three relief storm sewers in Gettysburg, one on Baltimore street, another on Carlisle street and a third on Buford avenue, employing 62 men for two weeks, with a total expenditure for labor of $1,880.

Painting school buildings in Mt. Joy township, employing four men, three weeks, with an expenditure of $225.

17 Projects Submitted

Painting and reconstructing schools in the Arendtsville school district, employing approximately 15 men for five weeks, at a cost of $1,051.40.

Teaching members of the C. C. C. camps here, using six people, eleven weeks, at a total cost of $990.

Grading and draining roads in Cumberland township, employing 160 men for three weeks, at a cost of $5,166.

Seventeen projects have been submitted to and approved by the local administrator, who in turn, has sent them to Harrisburg for state approval. The labor costs in the 17 projects amount to $16,696.32. The payroll to date has totaled $1,001.02, with the probable payroll on December 7 amounting to $2,811.48. Thirteen other projects have been submitted to the local administrator but have been held up for lack of details.

Eddie Crist Has Autograph Of La Guardia

Added to his collection of souvenirs and autographs Eddie Crist, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Crist, Chambersburg street, today prizes his most recent autograph, that of Mayor-elect Fiorello La Guardia, of New York.

Accompanied by his father and Coach George Forney, of the Gettysburg high school eleven, Eddie attended the Army-Notre Dame football game, in the Yankee stadium, New York, Saturday.

Seated next to Eddie was Mayor-elect La Guardia, being "shot" by a "brigade" of cameramen. After the photographers had finished taking their pictures Mayor-elect La Guardia turned to Eddie, picked up his football program and autographed it for the local youth.

Eddie has a number of autographs from men and women prominent in the news.

President Roosevelt was ready with his proclamation ending certain taxes January 1.

Colorful Furniture Show Presents Creative Genius Of 3 Prominent Designers

An array of beds, dressing tables, bed-room suites, dining room suites, end tables, coffee tables, tea tables, occasional tables, chairs, bureaus and countless furniture novelties, attractively arranged in a colorful setting, comprises Gettysburg's first public furniture show.

The scene of the exhibit is C. W. Epley's spacious display room on York street. The sponsors of the show are the Gettysburg and Reaser Furniture factories, the Hanover Cabinet company and the Peerless Furniture company, of Shippensburg.

It is the largest and most pretentious display of furniture, locally manufactured, ever exhibited to public inspection here and it presents the finished product of the creative genius of man, molded in lumber, varnish and paint.

The various pieces are made of oriental walnut, maple, ash, rosewood, zebra, hairwood, mahogany, but walnut and stripe walnut.

The finish is of the most beautiful and durable attainable.

The creative genius of the various pieces are credited to Henry Cordes, M. C. Jones, general manager of the furniture factories, and William Berdine. These three men have created many furniture designs that have won the instant approval of furniture buyers throughout the country for many years.

The various bedroom and dining room suites are attractively arranged on either side of the large main aisle that extends the entire length of the large display room.

Dressing tables, bed tables and other pieces are set-off with electric lamps. The furniture is arranged, in many instances, as it would be arranged or placed in a modern home.

Along the main aisle are arranged the various occasional tables including the most recent designs in end and occasional tables. They are square, round, octagon, oblong, half-circle and modernistic. They have various finishes corresponding to the particular design of each piece.

BINGAMAN IS ON TRIAL FOR SAME OFFENSE

Fair Is Calm As Verdict Is Rendered; Aged Mother, Wife Cry.

NO DEFENSE IS PRESENTED

After deliberating almost four hours a jury in Hagerstown found Elvin E. Fair, 22, of Gettysburg, guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of Reuben N. Sollenberger, gasoline filling station attendant, on the morning of September 27. The verdict was returned at 8:25 o'clock Monday night. The jury made no recommendation for mercy and the court may impose the death penalty or life imprisonment.

The trial of Emanuel "Babe" Bingaman, 19, on a similar charge, started at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. It required the entire morning to select a jury. J. Ellis Grove, of Hancock, is foreman of the jury. Attorney John Wagaman is Bingaman's attorney, assisted by D. Engle Wolfinger.

Fair, well groomed and calm through the trial which lasted but one day, received the sentence with composure. His aged mother and youthful wife wept bitterly in the court room for almost fifteen minutes. Later they were assisted from the building.

After receiving a long embrace from his wife of three years Fair was rushed to the county jail by Sheriff W. Bruce Downin and Deputy Sheriff Robert Taylor.

The trial opened Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock and testimony was started shortly before the noon recess. Throughout the continuous court session Fair's aged mother, his wife and sister wept bitterly. Fair held his mother's hand and frequently talked to her during the trial in efforts to console her.

Prisoner Calm

Fair maintained an unusual calm throughout the trial. Even when he stood to hear the verdict pronounced by Charles Clopper, foreman of the jury, Fair raised his right hand and stood motionless for nearly a minute.

Several hundred persons appeared in the court room when the verdict was returned.

The murder was committed about 1:30 o'clock the morning of September 27. Residents in the vicinity of the filling station arose from their beds after hearing the shots and found Sollenberger unconscious on the pavement. Police responded quickly and while the wounded man was being taken to the hospital, squads of officers began a search for the two youths.

Car Led To Identity
The license number of the car led to the identity of the two youths. With the cooperation of Pennsylvania state police Bingaman was arrested at the home of a girl near Emmitsburg the night following the murder while Fair was arrested a day later in Washington.

The defense offered no evidence. Captain of Police Clarence G. Emmert was the state's star witness. After testifying to the course of the bullet after striking Sollenberger in the side near the heart, and the manner in which the names of the two fugitives sought were obtained, Captain Emmert read a confession made by Fair after he was returned from Washington where he was arrested two days after the murder.

Confession Admitted
In the presence of State's Attorney J. Lloyd Harshman, County Investigator Martin L. Ingram, Detective William Peters and Captain Emmert, Fair was quoted as relating his actions from the time he purchased a revolver, black-jack and eight cartridges in Baltimore on September 25 to the time of his apprehension in Washington.

Captain Emmert quoted Fair as admitting ownership of the automobile bearing Pennsylvania tags found abandoned by police on Howard street, Hagerstown, about 20 yards east of the filling station, as well as admitting the 38 calibre revolver found in his possession when arrested in Washington was his property.

Fair, according to the statement, purchased the revolver, black-jack and cartridges at three different establishments in Baltimore. He was quoted as saying that Bingaman was his partner in the crime.

BURGESS ENDS 8-YEAR REIGN

C. A. Heiges Expresses Thanks To Council For Its "Courtesies."

Appearing before council for the last time at the regular December meeting, Monday evening, Burgess C. A. Heiges thanked council for its "cooperation and courtesies" and gave a resume of his activities during his eight years in office.

"During the eight years I have served as Burgess," Mr. Heiges said, "I missed only two meetings, once on account of illness and another time to attend the wedding of my son."

Burgess Heiges said during his eight years in office he collected and turned over to council $13,044.10, from permits, fines and licenses.

The money was collected, as follows: Building permits, $335; digging permits, $5,713; sewer permits, $117; gutter licenses, $779; peddlers' licenses, $4,175.89; taxi licenses, $1219.50, and fines, $747.50.

Mr. Heiges said he would always take with him "pleasant memories" of his associations with the present council in the past two years.

Upon motion of Councilman C. Ray Rupp, Burgess Heiges was given a vote of thanks for his "efficient service" and his "loyalty to the administration."

Fair, according to the statement, purchased the revolver, black-jack and cartridges at three different establishments in Baltimore. He was quoted as saying that Bingaman was his partner in the crime.

President A. R. LeVan voted against the "stagger" system just as he voted against the original motion for the installation of a "white way" at the November meeting. He said he voted against the "white way" because he feared it would increase taxes. All other councilmen voted for the "white way."

Mitchell Receives First Rum License

Mitchell's restaurant, center square, is the first of Gettysburg's eating places to receive a license from the Pennsylvania liquor control board to sell liquor after repeal becomes effective this evening.

George F. Mitchell, proprietor of the restaurant, this afternoon said that although he has ordered liquor, he does not expect to have any of it delivered in time to serve it publicly when repeal becomes effective about 9:30 o'clock this evening.

Mitchell said his license cost him $260.

Two Littlestown eating places also were issued liquor licenses by the state on Monday. They are Schotties restaurant and the Littlestown hotel.

$2,000 BLAZE ON BREAM FARM

Barn And Chicken House Destroyed In Early Morning Fire Today.

Fire, believed to have started from spontaneous combustion in corn fodder, destroyed the barn and a chicken house on the farm of F. Mark Bream, Carlisle street, in Franklin township, southwest of Cashtown, at 7 o'clock this morning. The loss is estimated at $2,000.

All farming implements and a quantity of corn fodder and corn were destroyed. The livestock, including two horses and several hogs was saved. All of the chickens were saved.

Robert Crone is tenant on the farm, but both he and Bream, the owner, are on a hunting trip upstate.

The barn, a 40-foot structure, was beyond saving when the Cashtown community fire company arrived. There is no telephone on the farm and it was necessary to go to Cashtown to turn in the alarm.

Insurance was carried on the barn, but there was no protection on the machinery or crops. The farming implements belonged to Mr. Bream.

Five youths were injured, none seriously, when the automobile in which they were riding turned over on Winding Hill, about two miles west of White Hill on the Gettysburg-Harrisburg road Sunday morning at about 12:30 o'clock. The machine, a sedan, was being driven toward Harrisburg by Joseph Reaser, 20, East Broadway, when it left the highway on a sharp curve.

Reaser received cuts and bruises of the right leg. Preston Null, 18, Gettysburg R. 3, received lacerations of the right foot and brush burns on the forehead. Charles Grove, 19, Hanover, suffered brush burns of both wrists. Paul Harbaugh, 18, Gettysburg R. 1, suffered brush burns and contusions of the left leg. Robert Brady, 19, Hanover, received brush burns and contusions about the face.

All were treated at the Harrisburg hospital.

Fair Convicted Of First Degree Murder By Hagerstown Jury On Monday Evening; No Recommendation For Mercy Is Given

GUILTY of first degree murder was the verdict rendered by a jury of twelve men, including one negro, in the Hagerstown circuit court, Monday evening, against Elvin E. Fair, Gettysburg. The photo below shows Fair as he was lodged in the Washington, D. C., jail after his arrest in that city.

An array of beds, dressing tables, bed-room suites, dining room suites, end tables, coffee tables, tea tables, occasional tables, chairs, bureaus and countless furniture novelties, attractively arranged in a colorful setting, comprises Gettysburg's first public furniture show.

The scene of the exhibit is C. W. Epley's spacious display room on York street. The sponsors of the show are the Gettysburg and Reaser Furniture factories, the Hanover Cabinet company and the Peerless Furniture company, of Shippensburg.

It is the largest and most pretentious display of furniture, locally manufactured, ever exhibited to public inspection here and it presents the finished product of the creative genius of man, molded in lumber, varnish and paint.

The creative genius of the various pieces are credited to Henry Cordes, M. C. Jones, general manager of the furniture factories, and William Berdine. These three men have created many furniture designs that have won the instant approval of furniture buyers throughout the country for many years.

The various bedroom and dining room suites are attractively arranged on either side of the large main aisle that extends the entire length of the large display room.

Dressing tables, bed tables and other pieces are set-off with electric lamps. The furniture is arranged, in many instances, as it would be arranged or placed in a modern home.

Along the main aisle are arranged the various occasional tables including the most recent designs in end and occasional tables. They are square, round, octagon, oblong, half-circle and modernistic. They have various finishes corresponding to the particular design of each piece.

NO DEFENSE IS PRESENTED

After deliberating almost four hours a jury in Hagerstown found Elvin E. Fair, 22, of Gettysburg, guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of Reuben N. Sollenberger, gasoline filling station attendant, on the morning of September 27. The verdict was returned at 8:25 o'clock Monday night. The jury made no recommendation for mercy and the court may impose the death penalty or life imprisonment.

The trial of Emanuel "Babe" Bingaman, 19, on a similar charge, started at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. It required the entire morning to select a jury. J. Ellis Grove, of Hancock, is foreman of the jury. Attorney John Wagaman is Bingaman's attorney, assisted by D. Engle Wolfinger.

Fair, well groomed and calm through the trial which lasted but one day, received the sentence with composure. His aged mother and youthful wife wept bitterly in the court room for almost fifteen minutes. Later they were assisted from the building.

The trial opened Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock and testimony was started shortly before the noon recess. Throughout the continuous court session Fair's aged mother, his wife and sister wept bitterly. Fair held his mother's hand and frequently talked to her during the trial in efforts to console her.

Prisoner Calm

Fair maintained an unusual calm throughout the trial. Even when he stood to hear the verdict pronounced by Charles Clopper, foreman of the jury, Fair raised his right hand and stood motionless for nearly a minute.

Several hundred persons appeared in the court room when the verdict was returned.

The murder was committed about 1:30 o'clock the morning of September 27. Residents in the vicinity of the filling station arose from their beds after hearing the shots and found Sollenberger unconscious on the pavement. Police responded quickly and while the wounded man was being taken to the hospital, squads of officers began a search for the two youths.

Car Led To Identity

The license number of the car led to the identity of the two youths. With the cooperation of Pennsylvania state police Bingaman was arrested at the home of a girl near Emmitsburg the night following the murder while Fair was arrested a day later in Washington.

The defense offered no evidence. Captain of Police Clarence G. Emmert was the state's star witness.

After testifying to the course of the bullet after striking Sollenberger in the side near the heart, and the manner in which the names of the two fugitives sought were obtained, Captain Emmert read a confession made by Fair after he was returned from Washington where he was arrested two days after the murder.

Confession Admitted

In the presence of State's Attorney J. Loyd Harshman, County Investigator Martin L. Ingram, Detective William Peters and Captain Emmert, Fair was quoted as relating his actions from the time he purchased a revolver, black-jack and eight cartridges in Baltimore on September 25 to the time of his apprehension in Washington.

Captain Emmert quoted Fair as admitting ownership of the automobile bearing Pennsylvania tags found abandoned by police on Howard street, Hagerstown, about 20 yards east of the filling station, as well as admitting the 38 calibre revolver found in his possession when arrested in Washington was his property.

Fair, according to the statement, purchased the revolver, black-jack and cartridges at three different establishments in Baltimore. He was quoted as saying that Binga-

Buffalo Defeated In 3-Day Fight

Old Town, Olla Dec 4 (AP)—An unadvertised revolution and a three-day battle deposed another monarch last week on the huge buffalo ranch of Major Gordon W. Lillie (Paynee Bill) Old Patriarch, the big bull which has led Paynee Bill's buffalo herd for ten years, was challenged and finally beaten by a younger bull.

The battle raged for three days and three nights, with intermissions when both animals, seemingly by common consent, would sink to the ground exhausted. A herd of cows and calves ranged the fighters, watching and waiting. Time after time the bulls charged headlong at each other, crashing their shaggy skulls together with the force of piledrivers. Old Patriarch finally failed to use. The younger bull led the cows and calves away. Major Lillie has named the winner New Deal.

Federal Pay Roll Reveals Increase

Washington, Dec 4—Expansion of the federal pay roll to the extent of 13,683 new employees since the administration change March 4 last was shown Saturday in the monthly figures of the civil service commission listing a monthly increase of 10,814 in Washington and in the field on the basis of returns as of October 31.

Despite decreases in some of the older departments of the government brought about by the economy drives the emergency agencies financed by borrowed funds have more than absorbed the personnel affected and served to expand the federal force.

The October figures put the net addition in the District of Columbia at 1,314 and 9,500 outside. Since February 28 last 4,252 have been added to the pay rolls in Washington and 9,431 outside.

The new figures relate to what is known as federal executive civil service including both competitive classified under the civil service law and those not so classified. This does not include the legislative and judicial branches of the government or the armed forces of the army and navy or employees of the District of Columbia government. Nor does it include the 315,000 men enrolled in the civilian conservation corps or any of the pay roll of the new civil works administration.

Miami, Oklahoma, high school's football team was unbeaten for three years until Claremore ended the string in a 6-0 game. Montana has 56 counties, an average one for each 10,000 population.

about Cigarettes

Not so long ago practically all cigarettes were made by hand

Now, Chesterfields are made by high-speed machines that turn out 750 cigarettes a minute, and the cigarettes are practically not touched by hand.

BY the use of long steel ovens—drying machines of the most modern type—and by ageing the leaf tobacco for 30 months—like wine is aged—Chesterfield tobacco is milder and tastes better.

Only pure cigarette paper—the best made—is used for Chesterfield.

And to make sure that everything that goes into Chesterfield is just right, expert chemists test all materials that are used in any way in the manufacture.

Chesterfields are made and packed in clean, up-to-date factories, where the air is changed every 4½ minutes. The moisture-proof package, wrapped in Du Pont's No. 300 Cellophane—the best made—reaches you just as if you went by the factory door.

In a letter to us, an eminent scientist says:

"Chesterfield Cigarettes are just as pure as the water you drink."

Fair Convicted

(Continued from First Page) man accompanied him on the Baltimore trip and returned to Gettysburg with him Monday night. Fair was quoted as saying he and Bingaman arrived in Hagers town the night of September 26 and that Bingaman had the gun in his coat pocket. Captain Emmert said Fair told him they went into the Fairmount garage on Potomac avenue for the purpose of staging a hold-up but that when an officer arrived they left and got into their car.

Then, Fair was quoted as saying, they proceeded south, passed the filling station, went to the Norfolk and Western railroad crossing, returned to the station and parked the car on the north side of Howard street about 20 yards east of the station. Fair was quoted as saying he left the motor running in order to make a quick getaway.

"Babe (nickname for Bingaman) told me that would be a good place to get," Fair was quoted as saying as they passed the station and saw Sollenberger seated in the office at a desk.

Captain Emmert then said that Fair told him he and Bingaman went to the station, with Bingaman in front. He was quoted as saying that "Babe told him to stick them up. He (meaning Sollenberger) reached in his hip-pocket for his gun, Babe shot him and I ran out the door. We left the car standing because bullets were flying."

Apparently, mortally wounded, Sollenberger ran from the station in pursuit and fired at least twice before he dropped to the concrete pavement in front of the station. He died in the Washington county hospital a few minutes later without regaining consciousness.

Fair admitted, according to the statement submitted, to leading the revolver before the attempted hold-up. Asked how "Babe" held the revolver when he fired, Fair was quoted as saying: "I don't remember; I was back of him."

Fair's statement was to the effect they separated Wednesday afternoon or evening. Bingaman proceeding to Emmitsburg and Fair going to Washington.

LONG BURNED IN EFFIGY BY MOB

Louisiana "Kingfish" Is Mocked By Laughing, Hooting Crowd Monday.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 5 (AP)—Senator Huey P. Long's political dynasty in Louisiana ran up against open revolution in the sixth congressional district Monday night as the state administration ordered a proposed district election to proceed today and forces opposing the election secured court injunctions to prevent the balloting.

Seven days of citizens' demonstrations against the administration reached a climax in Hammond Monday afternoon when a laughing, hooting crowd ranged effigies of Senator Long and Chairman Lee Ponder, of the district democratic committee, on the courthouse square and then burned the figures at stake.

Black Eyes in Evidence The effigy of the self-styled Kingfish, wearing a black-eye and labeled "Long Island Huey—Every Dog Has His Day," was paraded through downtown streets before it was hanged on a painted gallows. The figure clutched a small rubber dog bearing the name of Gov. O. K. Allen.

In three parishes of the district a district judge swore in 300 special deputies to see that the court's order against the holding of the election was not violated.

Ballots Burned Earlier in the day the town of Hammond, with others in the area, had defied the state by seizing and burning ballots prepared for today's election, in which the administration hoped to see Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, Senator Long's candidate, to congress without opposition and without a party's primary.

Monday's effigy demonstration followed upon an order handed down to citizens by Judge Nat Tyer, making absolute an injunction to prevent the election supervisors of Tangipahoa, Livingston and St. Helena parishes from distributing the ballots to the polls. Judge Tyer followed up his ruling by swearing in 300 men as special deputies to see that his injunction was respected.

Borough Lock-up As a result, Mr. Vosbury was asked to remain for a conference with Mr. McConaghie this morning. Council was informed that the state highway department is not maintaining streets on the state's highway system in Gettysburg. The highway committee was instructed to take up the matter with S. S. Lewis, state secretary of highways.

The report of Burgess Heiges for the month of November showed collections of $154.25.

Get From 6 To 12 Years For Attempting To Shoot Way Out Of Jail.

Pottsville, Dec. 5. — Sentences totaling from six to twelve years were imposed Monday by President Judge Roy P. Hicks upon two Schuylkill county convicts who Sunday attempted to shoot their way out of prison here after beating a guard and stealing his keys and rifles.

William Kurchinsky and Joseph Mocumaus, the convicts, were given a hearing Monday morning before Alderman Shimer and pleaded guilty on charges of attempted jail-breaking and assault and battery with intent to kill.

When they were brought before court Monday afternoon, Judge Hicks sentenced both of them to serve from two and one-half to five years in solitary confinement in the Eastern penitentiary on the jail breaking charge. On that count he also sentenced them to pay a fine of $5 each and the costs.

On the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill upon Joseph Kershofsky, of Mahanoy City, the guard upon whom they pounced when they made their daring break, Judge Hicks sentenced both men to serve from three and one-half to seven years in the Eastern penitentiary. Fair Convicted man accompanied him on the Baltimore trip and returned to Gettysburg with him Monday night.

Fair was quoted as saying he and Bingaman arrived in Hagers-town the night of September 26 and that Bingaman had the gun in his coat pocket. Captain Emmert said Fair told him they went into the Fairmount garage on Potomac avenue for the purpose of staging a hold-up but that when an officer arrived they left and got into their car.

Then, Fair was quoted as saying, they proceeded south, passed the filling station, went to the Norfolk and Western railroad crossing, returned to the station and parked the car on the north side of Howard street about 20 yards east of the station. Fair was quoted as saying he left the motor running in order to make a quick getaway.

"Babe (nickname for Bingaman) told me that would be a good place to get," Fair was quoted as saying as they passed the station and saw Sollenberger seated in the office at a desk.

Captain Emmert then said that Fair told him he and Bingaman went to the station, with Bingaman in front. He was quoted as saying that "Babe told him to stick them up. He (meaning Sollenberger) reached in his hip-pocket for his gun, Babe shot him and I ran out the door. We left the car standing because bullets were flying."

Apparently, mortally wounded, Sollenberger ran from the station in pursuit and fired at least twice before he dropped to the concrete pavement in front of the station. He died in the Washington county hospital a few minutes later without regaining consciousness.

Fair admitted, according to the statement submitted, to leading the revolver before the attempted hold-up. Asked how "Babe" held the revolver when he fired, Fair was quoted as saying: "I don't remember; I was back of him."

Fair's statement was to the effect they separated Wednesday afternoon or evening, Bingaman proceeding to Emmitsburg and Fair going to Washington.

Shouse, Monday were named defendants in a $75,000 personal injuries suit filed by Lewis C. Willingham in the city court.

Through his attorney, George Farber, the plaintiff asserted he was injured when struck by the defendants' machine on the Washington boulevard, near Elkridge, last November 4. The action is to recover damages for his injuries.

Mr. Willingham, who formerly lived in the 1600 block East Pratt street, is said to be in a hospital. The defendants reside in Washington.

Louisiana "Kingfish" Is Mocked By Laughing, Hooting Crowd Monday.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 5 (AP)—Senator Huey P. Long's political dynasty in Louisiana ran up against open revolution in the sixth congressional district Monday night as the state administration ordered a proposed district election to proceed today and forces opposing the election secured court injunctions to prevent the balloting.

Seven days of citizens' demonstrations against the administration reached a climax in Hammond Monday afternoon when a laughing, hooting crowd ranged effigies of Senator Long and Chairman Lee Ponder, of the district democratic committee, on the courthouse square and then burned the figures at stake.

Black Eyes in Evidence

The effigy of the self-styled Kingfish, wearing a black-eye and labeled "Long Island Huey—Every Dog Has His Day," was paraded through downtown streets before it was hanged on a painted gallows. The figure clutched a small rubber dog bearing the name of Gov. O. K. Allen.

In three parishes of the district a district jurge swore in 300 special deputies to see that the court's order against the holding of the election was not violated.

Ballots Burned

Earlier in the day the town of Hammond, with others in the area, had defied the state by seizing and burning ballots prepared for today's election, in which the administration hoped to see Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, Senator Long's candidate, to congress without opposition and without a party's primary.

Monday's effigy demonstration followed upon an order handed down to citizens by Judge Nat Tyler, making absolute an injunction to prevent the election supervisors of Tangipahoa, Livingston and St. Helena parishes from distributing the ballots to the polls. Judge Tyler followed up his ruling by swearing in 300 men as special deputies to see that his injunction was respected.

sanitary sewer system, whether wired for electricity or served by gas and many other details. Council voted to submit the survey as a project to James R. McConaghie, Adams county administrator for the CWA.

W. D. Vosbury, of the engineering firm of Remington, Vosbury and Goff, Camden, New Jersey, appeared before council and informed the borough fathers that the cost of reconstructing the sewage disposal plant here would be $88,095. He was informed that much of the labor and some of the materials for the work would be furnished by the federal government.

Borough Lock-up

As a result, Mr. Vosbury was asked to remain for a conference with Mr. McConaghie this morning. Plans for the borough's proposed lock-up at the fire engine house were presented to council and approved. The lock-up will contain four cells, with two bunks in each. The property committee was instructed to install steel cages or concrete partitions.

All streets and alleys in Gettysburg, not previously ordered, were ordered ordered. This was done so the local CWA projects might not be delayed.

Council was informed that the state highway department is not maintaining streets on the state's highway system in Gettysburg. The highway committee was instructed to take up the matter with S. S. Lewis, state secretary of highways.

The report of Burgess Heiges for the month of November showed collections of $154.25.

Besides President LeVan, councilmen present at the meeting included E. C. Williams, D. C. Stallsmith, C. W. Epley, J. B. Wineman, C. Ray Rupp and John Newman.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thanksgiving Day: In conformity to the proclamation of the President and Governor, Thursday was observed in Gettysburg by a general cessation of business, closing of stores and family reunions. The day was bright and cheerful, and everybody seemed to enjoy it. At 10½ o'clock a. m., a large congregation assembled in Christ church, the pastors of the different churches having arranged for a union service. Rev. J. K. Demarest, of the Presbyterian church, delivered the sermon, Drs. Hay and Swartz and Rev. M. Strawinski taking part in the devotional services.

Sales: Mr. Mumper has sold to the Gettysburg and Harrisburg railroad about 4 acres south of his residence, between the "tape-worm" and the Chambersburg pike, for $1-000. The road to Round Top will run through this lot.

Emanuel Plank has purchased the Mill property of C. P. Bream on Marsh Creek at $8,500.

Alex D. Oyer has purchased the property of Nicholas Readle, in Buchanan Valley, 45 acres and improvements for $1,000.

G. W. Wortz sold a house and lot in Fairfield to Izer Brothers for $675.

E. R. Moor sold 31 acres of woodland to G. W. Wortz, at $17.25 per acre.

Moreover Jeremiah said unto
the people, and to all the women, hear the word of the Lord, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt:

Thus saith the Lord of hosts,
the God of Israel, saying, Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled
with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to
the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

Therefore hear ye the word of the Lord, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt: Behold, I have sworn by my great name, saith the Lord, that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord God liveth.

Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, that are gone into the land of Judah; and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know these words shall stand, mine, or theirs.

And this shall be a sign unto you, saith the Lord, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against your for evil.

Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt in the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life; as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that fought his life.

Wolf, resigned.

The H. J. & Get. railroad company has contracted with the Baldwin Locomotive Works for a new forty ton engine to cost $10,000.

On Tuesday Jacob A. Kitzmiller,

First National Bank of Gettysburg, can, resigned.

Robert G. M. McCreary, Esq., of this place has been quite sick for time being such as to excite grave apprehension on the part of his friends.

The New Railroad: On Saturday morning in response to a very corteous invitation from Col. Fuller, a number of gentlemen from this place took carriages and drove to Gideon Baugher's on the line of the Gettysburg and Harrisburg railroad. At that point we were met by Col. Fuller, Superintendent of the new locomotive "Jay Cooke." After interchange of greetings, the order "all aboard" was given, and the train started for Hunter's Run, stopping at the "big trestle" and other points of interest, to give the party opportunity to thoroughly inspect the work. The track is now all laid between Hunter's Run and Opussum Creek.

In passing over the completed
portion of the line, about 11 miles, we were impressed with the thoroughness of the work at every point.
The bridging is the strongest possible kind. The road-bed throughout is of the most substantial character. Col. Fuller has no idea of running a "one-horse" concern, but means, when it is finished, to challenge comparison with the best
road beds in the country.

Science and Revelation: Dr. Kieffer had a good audience in the opera house to hear his lecture on "Science and Revelation." It was a very able effort, showing careful study and familiarity with the various metaphysical schools of thought and the lines of attack on Christianity. The Dr. held the close attention of the audience for nearly two hours, and was greeted with generous applause at the close. Before and after the lecture the audience was favored with excellent vocal music, Mr. Wolf presiding at the organ.

Teacher's Institute: The 29th annual meeting of the Adams County Teachers' Institute met in the Court House on Monday afternoon,
and was called to order by County Superintendent Sheely. Devotional
exercises, conducted by Rev. J.
Jamison. Mr. Sheely delivered a very appropriate address of welcome to the teachers. The follow-
appointed: Messrs P. D. W. Han-key, J. C. Hilderbrand and T. E.
Myers, Misses Alice M. Seabrooks and Mary Neely.

The fee of membership was fixed at 75 cents. The committee on organization reported the following: President, Aaron Sheely; Vice Presidents, Calvin Hamilton, Thomas D.
McCreary; Recording Secretary, R.
P. Forrest; Assistants, W. J. Metzler, Miss Alice Powers.

Music was rendered by the Institute Master, Ira Tipton, presiding at the organ.

Remarkable Sunsets: During the

series of remarkable sunsets, of more or less distinctly defined rose-tint hues.

The strang phenomenon is engaging the attention of scientists.

nisi, of this city, has been cited by local fascist headquarters because he made a neighborly neighborly remark, slighting allusion to the fascist regime. Danisi has instituted the principle of intelligent said that it was the duty of every comrade thus to resent slurs

FORBIDDEN VALLEY

By William Byron Mowery

SYNOPSIS: Curt Tennyson and Paul St. Clair, trailing the International crook Igor Karakhan into the Canadian Northwest, have joined parties with Ralph and Sonya Nichols, presumably entomologists on their way to study the insects of the Lilluar country, home of the extremely dangerous Klosohees. Indians. Curt is much taken with Sonya, but finds she has lied about being an entomologist. He determines to question her, but she gets the jump on him and asks why a man of his gifts should be a prospector, as Curt has claimed to be.

Chapter 20

SONYA'S SECRET

"You know I'm Russian," Sonya
went on. "If it were possible, I'd go back to Russia and try to play some part there, however small. When I flared out at you that evening, it was just my narrow personal feelings. But I can't go back. I'd probably be imprisoned the minute I landed. And besides I've been in Canada twelve years and feel Canadian, and a person can do something here too.

"When I say 'useful,' Curt, I don't mean professional uplifters and fussy reformers who go around prying into other people's way of living and trying to make everybody
conform to their own standards.
Heavens no! But there are roles where men can do a real good. Men with a conscience, I mean—and you've got a conscience."

Curt wished he could tell her of that evening in Edmonton when he had thrown away the Consolidated offer and taken on the Karakhan hunt. She would applaud that, where Rosalie had called him a fool and had utterly failed to understand
his motive. He recalled Sonya's words "liding around pleasantly," and he knew that that was how she would regard his plans to return north, if she knew about them.

Near five o'clock they came to a little bay, went ashore, gathered firewood and cleared a place for the two tents. It was the prettiest camp site of their trip.

They sat down under a pine to wait for the other canoes. Curt plucked nervously at the leaf of a maidenhair fern. He could stave off his talk with Sonya no longer.

"There's something I'd like to understand, Sonya. It's none of my business, except that I've got a friend's interest in you and Ralph—"

Sonya interrupted: "I know what you're going to say—that we're not entomologists. Ralph told me you asked him about that beetle. I knew you were suspicious and would find us out sometime."

She pointed to the pass. "And now you want to know why we're going into that country. You're thinking there's just some whim or rattlebrained idea behind our trip, aren't you?"

"On the contrary, I told Paul that you must have some pretty substantial motive."

"I'm glad you have that much confidence in us, after finding out how we lied." She picked a lichen off and unrolled it in her small brown fingers. "It is a substantial reason, Curt."

"I don't question that. But I do question your secrecy about the whole thing when the trip is so dangerous. If I knew what you're trying to do, I might be able to give you a hand."

Sonya shook her head. "I don't believe you would. In fact, I know you wouldn't."

"Are you afraid I'd go barging
into your plans like a bull in a china shop? I wouldn't."

She still shook her head in refusal. "I'd like to tell you. But I simply can't. It's in the very nature of my motive that I must keep
it to myself."

"I can't conceive of any such circumstance."

"Then you'll have to take my word
for it, Curt."

He felt provoked at her. It was possible that she or Ralph had heard some wild tale about a rich lode or placer in the Lilluars or that she wanted to make a study of the Klosohees themselves. But he could not believe either of these guesses.

"There's something else—still less
of my business, I suppose; but Sonya, why do you pretend this relationship to Ralph?"

That caught her a surprise. A color flew into her cheeks.

"Pretend—relationship—what do you mean?"

Curt was certain of his ground.
He plunged boldly:

"Ralph is no more your brother
than I am, girl. He's no relation to you at all."

"Why—why, how can you make an assertion like that?"

He lied: "Paul overheard you once. He didn't mean to listen, but he couldn't help it."

"How much else did Paul hear?"
Her tones were quick, frightened.

"When was this?"

"Two evenings ago. He didn't hear anything else."

Sonya breathed easier. Curt realized, too late, that he had made a mistake. There was something else, and she was afraid for him to know
it. If he had pretended he knew, he could probably have got it out of her.

She admitted reluctantly: "Yes, you're right; we're not related. I'll tell you why we made this—this arrangement. If I'd been alone, I couldn't have come in here at all. I wouldn't even have got as far as Russian Lake. Ralph's a good friend.
I knew I could trust Ralph implicitly. He's a gentleman through and through. Under the circumstances our arrangement was entirely sensi-
ble. It was the only recourse I had."

But all that told him nothing about her mission in that country.
Curt swung the talk back:

"Sonya, I'm not playing cards with you, or trying to meddle in your business, or looking for any advantage to myself. You may be justified in going on north. In that case I'll give you all the help in my power. But I've got to know what you're doing." He paused a moment, then added point-blank, "And you've got to tell me."

Sonya refused flatly. "I'm sorry, Curt. I can't do it."

There was no use to argue. He was irritated by her stubborn silence and jealous that Ralph should share her confidence while he was barred out.

"I suppose you're going to wash your hands of us now," she said.

"You intend to go on above the pass?" he demanded. And when she nodded: "You're fumbling dynamite, if you only knew it."

"I do know it. But there's a chance that we can get on friendly terms with the Klosohees."

"A mighty slim chance, from what old John tells me. You can't go on without Paul and me."

"We will."

She said it quietly, but Curt knew
she meant it. Her purposiveness was almost grim. Short of tying her up hand and foot and taking her back to Russian Lake he could not stop her.

"If we can make friends with the Klosohees," she said presently,
"there wouldn't be any danger at
all. That's the crux of the whole matter. You've had a good deal of experience with Indians, Curt; I believe you could manage it."

She leaped towards him, a plea into her voice. "I know I don't deserve help, after refusing to take you into my confidence; but won't you, anyway, Curt?"

As he saw the situation, he was forced to take his choice of helping her or letting her go into that country without protection. By themselves she and Ralph simply did not stand a chance. That great blue cleft up river would prove a one-way portal into Klosohee territory.

Perhaps he could work himself into the good graces of the Klosohees. If so, the whole danger would blow over, as she had said. At any rate Paul and he would be guarding
her.

They could go cautiously, keep their eyes open and bring her back to safety if trouble started popping.

He did not like the prospect. She would be exposed to danger, however careful he and Paul might be,
and he would be sadly handicapped on the Karakhan hunt. But the alternative was to let her go through that pass unprotected, defenseless;

and that was something he could not do.

Sonya was watching him, hanging upon his decision. Curt saw her fingers trembling as she waited. He thought it fine of her that in those moments she made not the slightest attempt to sway him by her charm or her powers as a girl.

"I'll make a bargain with you,
Sonya," he said finally. "It's this:
I'll take you in there and do everything I can with those Klosohees, but if I see that a friendly contact isn't possible you're to let Paul and me bring you back out, and you'll go on south to Russian Lake. Will you agree to that?"

Sonya clasped his hand. "Curt,
that's awfully splendid of you!"

"You promise, then? You'll turn back when I give the word, and you promise you'll go straight south to Russian Lake?"

"Yes, I promise."

THE RAILROAD STATION

RAILROAD stations have always fascinated me. I have stood in all types, it seems, and have watched people come and go in them.

Many years ago I used to stand and watch the people come into the Union Station in Kansas City, Missouri. It was an old station then —and into it from all corners of the great west, and middle west, came travelers of every race and nationality. There cowboys, Indians, early settlers, salesmen, professional folks, business people—everybody—swarmed. It was a study in human nature. Now a great new station has replaced the old, and has for many years—and yet the crowds don't seem the same!

There are the great stations in New York City—into which millions pass year in and year out. Beehives and streams of human beings sieving into the life of the city and nation. And then there are the small stations in the smaller towns—some with but a single room and a round stove in the center to heat it during the cold days of winter. It has a personality all its own.

I never feel the time I have to spend at a station is wasted. I like to speculate upon each person who is there, where he is going—and why.
Every phase of human emotion seems to pass through a railroad station —meetings, partings, home-comings, departures to lands far away. The anxious line of those awaiting the arrival of trains is most interesting.
The happy greetings thrill one! The long journey of the traveller over —the union with those beloved. And yet, how sad so many of the departures from these same railroad stations.

Trains may come and trains may go—but the human heart is forever travelling—to dream-of lands, to lands once known and loved, and into hearts separated through time and by space.

The human brain is a railroad station. Into it run innumerable tracks that bring to it every bodily sensation, and from the outer world impressions that inspire commerce of ideas, and the sending out of thoughts that influence and give joy and courage to untold numbers!

Some of our brains are like the small stations, however, through which few passengers pass, while there are others among us who must needs build a great station of the mind—so as to enrich the world the more with its products and its service.

Your Health

The ameba is the most common cause of human things

It is a one-celled parasite

There are several varieties of the ameba and some of them are quite harmless

But there are some of these protozoal organisms which are extremely harmful which attack the walls of the intestines and produce ulcers

And causes what is known as amebic dysentery

The most recent epidemic has been the result of the infection of a considerable number of persons who attended the world's fair in Chicago and who stopped at a certain hotel in which some of the food handlers were infected with amebic dysentery and thereby transmitted then infection to some of the guests

More than 100,000 persons were exposed to the disease

The incubation period of amebic dysentery is anywhere from 9 to 95 days

From 9 to 95 days may elapse after the infection of the body before symptoms of the disease appear. On the average two cases of am-ebic dysentery are reported each month in the city of Chicago.

About the middle of August more cases began to appear

They were all traced to one hotel

Examination of the food handlers at this hotel showed that 92 out of 412 food handlers were infected with this disease

As visitors to this hotel scattered to their homes in various parts of the country, so were reports of amebic dysentery heard throughout the United States

Cases were reported from 26 cities and there were more than 75 cases in Chicago in one time last month

The disease may be acute and result in death as in the case of "Texas" Guinan or it may be of a chronic nature lasting for years

The symptoms are severe abdominal cramps and diarrhea

There is often a feeling of stings diness with fever and the appetite is sensitive

With modern methods of treatment if patients are treated early they are likely to recover

Protection of human beings against infection by food handlers is the first step in prevention of the disease

Moreover Jeremiah said unto
the people, and to all the
Lord, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt.

Thus saith the Lord of hosts
the God of Israel saying, Ye and
your wives have both spoken
with your mouths and fulfilled
with your hand saying, We will surely perform our vows that we
have vowed to burn incense to
out drink offerings unto her: we will surely accomplish our vows, and surely perform our vows.

Therefore hear ye the word of the Lord, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt. Behold I have sworn by my great name
saith the Lord, that my name
shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in
Lord God liveth.

Behold I will watch over them for evil and for good, and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by
the famine, until there be an end
of them.

Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out
of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah that are gone into the land of Judah and the remnant of Judah that are scattered there, shall know these words shall stand mine or theirs.

And this shall be a sign unto
you, saith the Lord, that I will
punish you in this place that ye
may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil.

Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt in the hand of his enemies
and into the hand of them that
seek his life: as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah in the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon
his enemy, and that fought his life.

spect the work. The track is now all laid between Hunters Run and Opopsum Creek.

In passing over the completed
portion of the line about 11 miles
we were impressed with the thoroughness of the work at every point.
The bridging is the strongest possible kind. The road-bed throughout is of the most substantial character. Col. Fuller has no idea of
means when it is finished, to challenge comparison with the best

Science and Revelation. Dr. Kieffer had a good audience in the opera house to hear his lecture on Science and Revelation. It was a very able effort showing careful study and familiarity with the various metaphysical schools of
Christianity. The Dr. held the close attention of the audience for nearly two hours and was greeted
with generous applause at the
close. Before and after the lecture
the audience was favored with ex-
siding at the organ.

Teacher's Institute. The 29th annual meeting of the Adams Coun-
Court House on Monday afternoon
and was called to order by County Superintendent Sheely. Devotional
exercises conducted by Rev. J.
Jamison. Mr. Sheely delivered a very appropriate address of welcome to the teachers. The follow-
key, J. C. Hildebrand and T. E.
Miers. Meses Alice M. Seabrooks
and Mary Neely.

The fee of membership was fixed
at 75 cents. The committee on organization reported the following:
President Calvin Hamilton. Thomas D.
McCrary. Recording Secretary R.
F. Forrest. Assistants W. J. Metz-
ler. Miss Alice Powers.

stitute Master Ira Tibbitt presiding
at the organ.

Remarkable Sunsets. During the last few weeks there have been a series of remarkable sunsets of
more or less distinctly defined rose-
tint hues.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY
By William Byron Mowery

SYNOPSIS: Curt Tennyson and Paul
St. Clair, training the International crook Igor Karakhan into the Canadian Northwest have joined parties with Ralph and Sonya Nichols, presumably chronologists on their way to study the records of the Lillaur country home of the extremely dangerous Klosshees. Indians. Curt is much taken with Sonya but finds she is much taken with him and asks why a man of his gifts should

Chapter 20
SONYA'S SECRET
'You know I'm Russian.' Sonya
went on. 'If it were possible, I'd go back to Russia and try to play some part there, however small. When I flared out at you that evening, it
was just my narrow personal feelings. But I can't go back. I'd probably be imprisoned the minute I landed. And besides I've been in Canada twelve years and feel Cana-
thing here too.'

When I say 'useful, Curt, I don't mean professional uplifters and fussv reformers who go around prying into other peoples way of liv-
conform to their own standards.
Heavens no! But there are roles
where men can do a real good. Men with a conscience. I mean—and

Curt wished he could tell her of
that evening in Edmonton when he had thrown away the Consolidated
offer and taken on the Karakhan
hunt. She would applaud that where Rosabe had called him a fool
and had utterly failed to understand
his motive. He recalled Sonya's words 'iding around pleasantly,'
and he knew that that was how she would regard his plans to return
north if she knew about them.

little bay, went ashore, gathered
firewood and cleared a place for the
site of their trip.

plucked nervously at the leaf of a madenhair fern. He could stave off his talk with Sonya no longer.

There's something I'd like to understand, Sonya. It's none of my business, except that I've got a friend's interest in you and Ralph—'

Sonya interrupted. 'I know what
you're going to say—that we're not entomologists. Ralph told me you asked him about that beetle I knew you were suspicious and would find us out somehow.'

She pointed to the pass. 'And
now you want to know why we're
thinking there's just some whim or
rattlebrained idea behind our trip
aren't you?'

On the contrary I told Paul that you must have some pretty substantial motive.'

'I'm glad you have that much
confidence in us, after finding out
how we lied.' She picked a lichen curl and unrolled it in her small brown fingers. 'It is a substantial
reason, Curt.'

I don't question that. But I do question your secrecy about the whole thing when the trip is so dangerous. If I knew what you're trying to do I might be able to give you a hand.'

Sonya shook her head. I don't believe you would. In fact, I know you wouldn't.'

Are you afraid I'd go barging
into your plans like a bull in a china
shop? I wouldn't.'

She still shook her head in refusal. 'I'd like to tell you. But I simply can't. It's in the very nature of my motive that I must keep
it to myself.'

'I can't conceive of any such circumstance.'

'Then you'll have to take my word
for it, Curt.'

He felt provoked at her. It was possible that she or Ralph had heard some wild tale about a rich lode or placer in the Lillaur or that she wanted to make a study of the Klosshees themselves. But he could not believe either of these guesses.

'There's something else—still less
of my business, I suppose, but Son-
ya, why do you pretend this relationship to Ralph?'

That caught her a surprise. A color flew into her cheeks.

'Pretend—relationship—what do
you mean?'

Curt was certain of his ground.
He plunged boldly.

you at all.'

an assertion like that?'

He lied. Paul overheard you once. He didn't mean to listen, but he couldn't help it.'

How much else did Paul hear?
Her tones were quick, frightened.
When was this?

'Two evenings ago. He didn't
hear anything else.'

Sonya breathed easier. Curt realized, too late, that he had made a mistake. There was something else
and she was afraid for him to know
it. If he had pretended he knew, he could probably have got it out of her.

She admitted reluctantly. 'Yes,
you're right. We're not related. I'll tell you why we made this—this arrangement. If I'd been alone, I couldn't have come in here at all. I wouldn't even have got as far as Russian Lake. Ralph's a good friend.
I knew I could trust Ralph implicitly.
He's a gentleman through and through. Under the circumstances
our arrangement was entirely sensi-
ble. It was the only recourse I had.'

But all that told him nothing
about her mission in that country.
Curt swung the talk back.

'Sonya, I'm not playing cards
with you, or trying to meddle in
your business, or looking for any advantage to myself. You may be justified in going on north. In that case I'll give you all the help in my power. But I've got to know what you're doing.' He paused a moment, then added point-blank, 'And
you've got to tell me.'

Sonya refused flatly. 'I'm sorry,
Curt. I can't do it.'

There was no use to argue. He
was irritated by her stubborn sil-
share her confidence while he was barred out.

'I suppose you're going to wash
your hands of us now,' she said.
'You intend to go on above the pass?' he demanded. And when she nodded. 'You're fumbling dynamite, if you only knew it.'

I do know it. But there's a chance that we can get on friendly terms with the Klosshees.'

old John tells me. You can't go on without Paul and me.'

'We will.'

She said it quietly, but Curt knew
she meant it. Her purposiveness was almost grim. Short of tying
her up hand and foot and taking
her back to Russian Lake he could
not stop her.

If we can make friends with the Klosshees," she said presently,
'there wouldn't be any danger at
all. That's the crux of the whole matter. You've had a good deal of experience with Indians, Curt. I believe you could manage it." She leaned towards him, a plea crept into her voice. 'I know I don't deserve help, after refusing to take
you into my confidence, but won't you, anyway, Curt?'

and that was something he could
not do.

upon his decision. Curt saw her fingers trembling as she waited. He thought it fine of her that in those moments she made not the slightest
attempt to sway him by her charm
or her powers as a girl.

'I'll make a bargain with you,
Sonya," he said finally. 'It's this:
I'll take you in there and do everything I can with those Klosshees,
but if I see that a friendly contact isn't possible you're to let Paul and
me bring you back out, and you'll
go on south to Russian Lake. Will you agree to that?'

Sonya clasped his hand. "Curt,
that's awfully splendid of you!"

'You promise, then? You'll turn back when I give the word, and you
Russian Lake?'

TODAY'S TALK
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE RAILROAD STATION

RAILROAD stations have always fascinated me. I have stood in all types, it seems, and have watched people come and go in them.

the Union Station in Kansas City, Missouri. It was an old station then
—and into it from all corners of the great west, and middle west, came travelers of every race and nationality. There cowboys, Indians, early settlers, salesmen, professional folks, business people—everybody—
swarmed. It was a study in human nature. Now a great new station
seem the same!

There are the great stations in New York City—into which millions pass year in and year out. Beehives and streams of human beings sweeping into the life of the city and nation. And then there are the small stations in the smaller towns—some with but a single room and a round stove in the center to heat it during the cold days of winter. It has a personality all its own.

I never feel the time I have to spend at a station is wasted. I like to speculate upon each person who is there where he is going—and why.
—meetings, partings, home-comings, departures to lands far away. The anxious line of those awaiting the arrival of trains is most interesting.
The happy greetings thrill one! The long journey of the traveler over —the union with those beloved. And yet, how sad so many of the departures from these same railroad stations.

Trains may come and trains may go—but the human heart is forever travelling—to dream-of lands to lands once known and loved and
into hearts separated through time and by space.

The human brain is a railroad station. Into it run innumerable tracks that bring to it every bodily sensation, and from the outer world impressions that inspire commerce of ideas, and the sending out of thoughts that influence and give joy and courage to untold numbers!

Some of our brains are like the small stations, however, through which
build a great station of the mind—so as to enrich the world the more with

LITTLE MEMORIES

It always seems somehow to me as though the simplest things Are those to which the memory of man the longest clings.

An old tune song of long ago, with its familiar strain,
Will blur the eyes with tears through which you seem to see again.

The tender brown-eyed sweetheart who first sang that tune for you.

And set you thinking of the days before a care you knew.
For seven and twenty years we've shared together every blow.

Known summer gardens gay with blooms and winter white with snow.

And all we've kept, it seems to me, to cherish from the past.
Are little joys so frail when born we thought they'd never last.

Yet here they are, still hale and strong and vibrant with delight.

Dancing before us down the years to keep our pathway bright.
Some tiny gift I gave to her, long hidden out of view,

We chance to come across, and lo!
there passes in review
Days when we laughed and dreamed and love touched everything with grace.

Although we fancied that the joys we shared were commonplace.

"Some day to better things than these we'll surely come," I said.

Not knowing how the memory would cherish moments fled.
Together now we often sit recalling days gone by.

Smiling o'er foolish things I did and still a fool am I.

Some simple cause will start the tears, an old-time song is sung.

And I reach out to hold her hand as when we both were young.
Not to our triumphs memory turns, but time and time again.

We find ourselves re-living joys we'd overlooked back then.

IL DUCE, AS CHAUFFEUR, GIVES KING FAST RIDE
Sant' Anna in Valderi, Italy (AP).—There were no frills connected with an automobile ride Mussolini gave King Victor Emmanuel at the army maneuvers in this zone. The Duce drove, he and the monarch being the only occupants of the speedy sports roadster in which they toured the region. His Majesty returned the favor by entertaining the premier at dinner in his castle here.

WYNEKOOP AS 'SKYRIDE MIKE'

Earle Wynekoop, husband of Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, victim in Chicago's operating room slaying, is shown here when he was "Skyride Mike" at the world's fair in Chicago during the summer. Seated with him is Mary Gerken, one of the cashiers at the fair, but Miss Gerken said she was not a sweetheart of Wynekoop. Police found a list of more than 50 names of young women Wynekoop met and "dated" at the fair. (Associated Press Photo)

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood. — Blue-eyed Jeanette Loff of the golden hair can always wonder what would have happened to her screen career had she followed her desire and made her screen debut some six years ago as "Jan Lov."

Jeanette is Scandinavian by descent, her mother Norwegian and her father Danish. The family name once was Lov, and Jeanette as a child was called Jan.

It was as Jan Lov that she played the organ in theatres up in Portland, Oregon, and sometimes appeared singing in theatre prologs, during vacations from school.

But when she came to Hollywood and signed a contract with Cecil B. DeMille, who seems to like American-sounding names, he wouldn't let her be anything but Jeanette Loff.

Sentenced

As Jeanette Loff, of course, she was sentenced to perpetual ingenu roles, which is why, even though she is still Jeanette Loff, she regards her return to films after two years on the stage as a turning point. The picture is "Mating Time," and she plays a country girl who goes bad.

"She turns out all right in the end," smiles Jeanette, sitting on the cream and blue davenport in her cream and blue and white apartment—her own idea, incidentally—"but what a change for one after playing so many nice girls! And they chose me from 50 other girls tested—do you suppose Broadway could have done all that for me?"

No More Roles

Miss Loff left Hollywood after surprising everybody by her singing in the Paul Whiteman screen revue, "The King of Jazz."

She had remained under contract to Universal for several months afterwards, but no more roles were forthcoming.

She went to New York, appeared in musical plays and with orchestras, and recently came back to Hollywood, looking for more pictures. Her return was timed fairly closely with the revival of the Whiteman film, which probably has done better on second release than on its first.

Hollywood.—In this unreel parade: Napoleon, to Darryl Zanuck's way of thinking, should be seen but not heard in the talkies. The little corpora will appear in George Arliss' "The House of Rothschild," but as a silent figure more or less in the background.

Zanuck contends that the fans' individual illusions about Napoleon would be destroyed should they hear his voice, although his mere appearance would not have that effect.

There is a pronouncement, of course, which will have no influence on the plans of Zanuck's former bosses, the Warner brothers, to make an all-talking "Napoleon."

Do, Re, Mi—

B. G. DeSylva, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson are together again on the Fox lot, but each is working on a different assignment.

Henderson arrived in George White's private car, along with Irving Caesar and Jack Yellen, more song-writers.

And that portable organ, which folds to look like a packing case when not in musical use, once more is a sight around the lot. It belongs to Fenderson.

Joseph Cunningham, New York writer who came to help White

"Scandalize" the films, is passing up the usual southern California charms—the blue skies and the tall palms and that thing they call a climate—to rave about the beach amusement piers!

Scotties And Such

The blond English miss with the pert name of Pat Paterson makes her entrance to Hollywood with a dog that has set a record of a sort by nipping at all members of Heather Angel's family, including her mother, her maid, her chauffeur and her two "Pekes"—all in three days.

Andrew, Pat's Scottie, also marked up a healthy bit, taken in Producer Robert Kane's Scottie. His preference for the Angel menage perhaps arises from the fact that Pat is Heather's house guest.

Hollywood.—The gleaming tresses that shine on the head of your favorite movie star are no longer included in the list of essentials to beauty as far as the screen is concerned.

Time-saving wigs that look exactly like the wearer's own hair are coming more and more into use as the stellar temperment wearies of hours spent under the care of hair-dressers and yearns for the simplicity of an every-day coiffure for her private life.

In most cases the artifice can be effected by the expenditure of between $300 and $400, the cost of a wig made of human hair.

Hard To Detect

Joan Blondell, who recently let her hair return to its natural chestnut shade once before tried to effect this change, just as she was to start in a picture.

The methods she employed not only changed the color of her hair, but made it necessary to crop it closely. She made the entire picture wearing a wig, and nobody was the wiser.

Brunet Gail Patrick's friends down in Alabama may not place her in "Death Takes A Holiday," but if they look closely they'll find her under a smart blond coiffure, so realistic that people here are asking if she has joined the blond brigade permanently.

She hasn't—"Why should I when there are wigs?"

Sylvia Sidney wanted to save that extra hour for sleep in the morning but art wouldn't permit it. She had a wig made for "Good Dame" but somehow, despite its cost, it didn't look like Sylvia's own hair. So she trots down early each day for the hair-dresser's ministrations.

Convenience An Item

Ann Harding's hair is one of her prize assets in beauty, and she wears wigs only when playing old ladies or young ones with marcel. In "Westward Passage," because Ann won't tolerate a curling iron, that regular wave was produced on a mop of false hair, with Ann's own flattened beneath it.

The once popular custom of bleaching or dyeing as various roles required has gone by the boards. Wigs are too convenient as well as harmless to the natural hair.

Mary Doran used to have a different shade of hair—black, brown, blond, red—almost every time she met her friends. She dyed it whenever a part dictated. For some time now it has stayed a rich reddish brown, and what with wigs in favor, it is likely to remain that way.

FREE STATE TO REORGANIZE ARMY

Dublin (AP).—The battalion system in the Free State army would be discarded and regiments formed under a plan framed by Defense Minister Aiken. The regiments, instead of being numbered, would be named for Irish patriots.

FLASHES ABOUT NEW YORK LIFE

Physicians Going To Sing Sing Sworn To Secrecy; City Has Two 1,000-Foot Piers.

New York—Notes plucked about the town:

Casey Jones often dons a 10-gallon sombrero when piloting a cabin plane.

Physicians summoned on special cases at Sing Sing prison hospital know their patients only by number. They are sworn to secrecy before being admitted.

The place where the late Georges Clemenceau once lived in Greenwich Village is now a movie house.

"Peter Pan," a sensational play in 1905, was never published until 1928. Barrie donated the original manuscript to a hospital benefit.

There are only two 1,000 foot piers on Manhattan, and they are needed only for ships as large as the Majestic or the (now retired) Leviathan. One rents for $270,000 a year, the other for $300,000.

Food For Rudy

Rudy Vallee, who, in the opinion of a lot of girls should dine on hummingbirds' wings and honeyed toast, really prefers pigs' knuckles and sauerkraut.

There is a restaurant on Eighth avenue operated by an ex-actor who, with his partner, understudied Montgomery and Stone. Any jobless actor or actress is permitted to eat there on credit. The owner admits that he frequently waits a long time for settlement, but that when performers land jobs they invariably settle their accounts.

A bus station in Times Square was in front of a fire plug. The plug, not the buses, was told to "move on." The plug was transferred a dozen yards down the block.

In 1855 there were only 27 millionaires in New York. In 1914 there were 4,500. Things have been changing too fast since then to et a definite figure.

'Depends On The View

Sinclair Lewis once wrote this about New York: "Steeped in her own insolence, striving to be cosmopolitan . . . dressed by London tailors, patronizing Italian restaurants, served by Greek waiters to the suggestive beats of African jazz—100 per cent filthy hybrids."

But Paul Morand, a French author, thought this about New York: "We love New York because she is the biggest city in the world and because she is inhabited by the strongest people, the only people, who, since the war, have succeeded in organizing their life; the only people, who, along with Italy, do not tear down, but on the contrary, have discovered how to build up."

Gertrude Lawrence keeps scrapbooks of the exploits of both Lindbergh and the Prince of Wales—her two heroes.

There is a Japanese florist in the west Seventies. He deals exclusively in oriental plants and his specialty is miniature gardens.

An elevator operator in Manhattan's tallest buildings travels on an average of 75 miles every day.

Dorothy Parker likes straps on her shoes. She often wears sandals, and she sometimes appears at formal parties with evening slippers of the ballet motif.

Atterbury's Kin Files For Divorce

Media, Penna., Dec. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Atterbury Connelly, daughter of W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, has started suit for divorce from James Alexander Connelly, Jr., son of a coal operator of Merion, Pa.

Mrs. Connelly charges her husband with indignities. She is twenty-nine years old and her husband thirty-nine. Mrs. Connelly lives in suburban Ithan, where she and Mr. Connelly were married in St. Martin's church on May 30, 1925. Mr. Connelly lives in Villanova. Pa. In her suit she alleges the indignities began in 1931 and that they occurred in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and North Carolina.

Mrs. Connelly is a graduate of Miss Irwin's school. Before her marriage she was known as an owner and exhibitor of prize-winning Great Danes, an ardent golfer and sportswoman.

KILLED DEMONSTRATING HOW HE MISSED DEATH

Union, S. C., Dec. 5 (AP).—"It was like this—"

Walter Cudd, 13, lifted his new rifle to show a group of his playmates how narrowly he missed being killed while hunting quail Saturday.

"I was holding the rifle just like this, with my finger just like this. See? I stumbled—"

But the story was never finished. The rifle exploded. Walter, a bullet through his chest, fell to the ground—dead.

Approve Projects To Employ 4,063

Harrisburg, Dec. 5 (AP).—Eric H. Biddle, civil works administrator for Pennsylvania Monday approved projects putting 4,063 men to work. Since the CWA campaign got underway in the Keystone state, jobs have been found for 63,136 men. Projects approved Monday are small, the largest giving work to 250 men on the streets in Olyphant. The only Adams county allocation was 60 men to grade a street in Gettysburg. This work has been completed.

A full week passed recently without a single birth in Augusta, Georgia, a city of some 60,000 population.
